

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Foreword by Julian Scott	xi
Preface to the English edition	xiii
Introduction	xv
Chapter 1 Pathophysiology	1
Notes	2
The five zang organs	4
Spleen	4
Lung	5
Kidney	6
Liver	7
Heart	7
Embryology in Chinese medicine	8
Chapter 2 Causes of disease	13
Notes	14
External pathogens	15
Emotions	17
Other causes	20
Chapter 3 Symptoms and signs	23
Notes	24
Four examinations (si zhen 四诊)	24
Symptoms and signs in pediatrics	26
Chapter 4 Pattern diagnosis	35
Notes	36
Insufficiency of Spleen qi	37
Insufficiency of Lung qi	39
Insufficiency of Kidney qi or jing	40

Food accumulation (shi ji 食积)	41
Internal heat	43
Invasion of external pathogens	44
Congealing of phlegm	45
Instability and clouding of the shen	48
Interaction of pathologies	50
Clinical notes on diagnosis	53
Chapter 5 Pediatric tuina: main techniques and locations	55
Main techniques (fa 法)	55
Alternative techniques (fa 法)	57
Points, lines and areas in pediatric tuina	61
Hand	61
Forearm	73
Head and neck	75
Chest, abdomen and back	81
Lower limb	87
Chapter 6 Acupuncture: main points used in pediatrics	89
Notes	89
Chapter 7 Auxiliary prevention and treatment methods	113
Moxibustion	113
Actions	114
Guasha	116
Actions	116
Plum-blossom needling (hammer needling)	117
Actions	117
Ear acupuncture	119
Actions	119
Cupping	121
Actions	122
Chapter 8 Treatment of main clinical patterns	123
Notes	123
Treatment guidelines for main patterns	125
Supplementing Spleen qi	125
Supplementing Lung qi	127
Supplementing the Kidney and jing	130
Freeing food accumulation (shi ji)	131
Eliminating heat	133
Expelling external pathogens	136
Transforming phlegm	138
Calming and clearing the shen	140

Prevention	143
Chapter 9 Clinical practice	145
The use of acupuncture for children	146
Needles and stimulating qi	146
Needles and children	148
Fear of needles	149
Technical notes on acupuncture	150
The use of pediatric tuina for children	151
Tuina and qi	151
Tuina and children	152
Technical notes on tuina	152
Tuina performed by parents	153
Notes	154
The relational space	154
The suspicious silence	155
Holding back	157
Processes of separation and differentiation	158
Negotiating the limits	160
Chapter 10 Diet	163
Dietary guidelines	164
Feeding	166
Weaning	167
The classification of foods and their uses	169
Classification of foods according to energy characteristics	169
Supplementing qi	174
Treating excess patterns (food accumulation, phlegm, dampness, heat)	175
Resisting external pathogens	176
The pleasure and enjoyment of eating	177
Recipes suitable for use during weaning	177
Recipes for children from one year upward and for all the family	179
Chapter 11 An approach to the treatment of clinical conditions	183
Atopic eczema	185
Chinese medicine pattern identification and treatment principles	186
Treatment guidelines	187
Attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder	194
Chinese medicine pattern identification and treatment principles	197
Treatment guidelines	199
Sleep problems	204
Chinese medicine pattern identification	205
Treatment guidelines	207

Gastrointestinal disorders	209
Chinese medicine pattern identification and treatment principles	209
Food accumulation (shi ji)	212
Heat	214
Insufficiency of Spleen and Stomach qi	216
Cold	220
Respiratory system disorders	222
Chinese medicine pattern identification and treatment principles	222
Wind-cold and wind-heat	226
Heat	230
Phlegm	233
Insufficiency of Lung qi	236
Chapter 12 Case histories	241
Case 1 Pushing always hurts	242
Case 2 Bottleneck stops the food going down	245
Case 3 Lively and greedy	248
Case 4 A baby who doesn't eat and doesn't grow	250
Case 5 Qi loses its way	253
Case 6 Too much heat to find repose	256
Case 7 The nest that won't descend	259
Case 8 Bad dreams	262
Case 9 Sick every two weeks	265
Case 10 An engine always running	268
Case 11 No more antibiotics!	272
Case 12 The green-eyed dragon	275
Case 13 Wow, what a buzz!	277
Case 14 Fear and fury	281
Case 15 Headaches at nine years old	285
Case 16 Restive movements	288
Case 17 A little help	292
Case 18 When things get easier at school too	294
Comparison of cases: Similarities and dissimilarities	297
Chapter 13 The work of the Xiaoxiao pediatric clinic	299
Organization and relationships	300
Working with parents	301
Training of acupuncturists and tuina therapists	302
Pilot projects	303
Parental evaluation	304
Bibliography	317
Index	327